TRIES SUICIDE-WHEN POSED FOR THE ROGUES GALLERY.

Reginald Spaniding Declares the "Countes" of Suffield" Is His Patron and Was to Have Presented His Rich Protegges at Court in Liquidation of a Debt

PITTSBURG, Nov. 25. - After he had declared in court that he was authorized by the "Countess of Su: "ield" to negotiate with rich Pittsburg people for introductions at the Court of St. James's for a financial consideration and had been ordered held as a suspicious person. Reginald Spaulding tried to commit suicide rather than face the rogues' gallery camera.

The fact that he seized the wrong jar from a tray of chemicals saved Spaulding's life. Spaulding was arrested on Saturday night after he had sent out many letters to Pittsburg families offering them introductions at King Edward's court, to most of which he received responses. He had also advertised for a man to accompany him on a foreign trip and had received scores of answers to this advertisement.

The police believe that Spaulding intended to make a big cleanup to-day, for he had appointments at the Hotel Henry with twenty or more wealthy Pittsburgers with whom he had been in communication regarding presentation at court. He had engaged two parlors and before noon the rich people began to arrive. Instead of meeting Spaulding they were met by detectives who advised them to go home

While these people besieged the hotel Spaulding was being arraigned before Magistrate Brady. When the Magistrate asked Spaulding what he had to say for himself

I can't see for the life of me why you have brought me here. I came to America and to Pittsburg on a legitimate enterprise which I am fully able to carry out. I have a great friend in the Countess of Suffield. You may not know it, but the Countess and her hus-band, the Earl of Suffield, have always been very close to King Edward. In fact they were members of his household while he was still the Prince of Wales. The Countess and the Earl entertained the King lavishly while he was a Prince, and largely through entertainment they became impoverished and have continued so since.

More than a year ago the Countess of Suffield borrowed a sum of money from me. She has been unable to pay it back since, and she told me that if I knew of any rich Americans who wanted to enter English society or who wanted to be introduced at court she would make the presentation in lieu of the money she owed me, I to make out of it what I could. It was on this proposition that I came to Pitts-

This sort of thing is done in England, and I had no idea I was doing any wrong in advertising to introduce daughters of wealthy Pittsburgers to the Court of England. I made no false representations when I advertised that I could make the presentation. I can do it. It can be done through the Countess of Suffield, who is my friend. If she can make money through her social influence what Magistrate Brady, after a conference with Captain of Detectives McGough, decided to send Spaulding to jail for five days as a suspicious person until the authorities in New York and Buffalo, who are thought to know something about Spaulding, can be communicated with.

When he heard the jail sentence Spaulding almost collapsed. He was hurried to the Bertillon bureau, where he was turned over to Detective Joseph Linden. Spaulding did everything in his power to prevent measurements being taken and Linden worked with him for half an hour trying to get him before the camera. Then he discovered that some chemicals he needed were missing and sent his assistant to were missing and sent his assistant to fetch them. The assistant brought in a tray on which were two jars, one containing a deadly poison the other a harmless salt.

Spaulding grabbed for the jars and got one of them. Linden seized him and a struggle followed, in which Spaulding finally got part of the jar's contents into his mouth. Linden tried to choke him, but Spaulding gulped it down. Then Linden discovered that Spaulding had seized the harmless jar, but Spaulding did not know the difference for some time.

Linden finally completed his measurements, subdued Spaulding and got a photograph of him. Then Spaulding was taken to the county jail, where he is to-night.

The Detective Bureau was besieged to-day by wealthy people, many of whom had been summoned by Capt. McGough. Several veiled women were among the number. Thirty persons who had opened negotiations for introductions into English society were consulted by the detectives. Some of them were indignant over the arrest of Spaulding and some insisted on giving Spaulding and some insisted on giving bail for him.

While the police refuse to give out any more of the letters written by Pittsburg women who were anxious to be introduced women who were anxious to be introduced at court they gave out several from men who had answered Spaulding's advertisement for a secretary with $500 to travel in foreign countries. Supt. McGough had one man before him this morning, who according to McGough is worth $2,000,000, who wanted the place in order that he could travel with Spaulding and be introduced by him. This man lives in a mansion in East Liberty. The letter he wrote, which led to his being summoned by the police, follows:

EAST LIBERTY, Nov. 22. EAST LIBERTY, Nov. 22.

DR. BARTON SO TESTIFIES AT HER TRIAL FOR MURDER.

Reading of the Hypothetical Question of 13,000 Words Consumes All the Morning and Part of the Afternoon Session of the Court-Scraps of Letters Read.

WASHINGTON, Nov. 25 .- The expert witesses only were heard to-day in the trial of Anna M. Bradley for the murder of former Senator Arthur Brown of Utah. Over two hours was required for the reading to the first alienist of the hypothetical question of 13,000 words framed by the attorneys for the defendant. It consumed all of the morning and a part of the after-

Dr. W. M. Barton of the George Wash ington University faculty was the expert and when the hypothetical question, which was made up from extracts of the testimony as shown in the record of the case, was submitted to him he expressed the opinion that the defendant was insane at the time she fired the shot and incapable of determining between right and wrong. On cross-examination the doctor adhered to his conclusion with steadfastness and described the defendant's affliction as "puerperal insanity." Such cases, he declared, were not uncommon as the result of criminal operations, especially where such operations were repeated. Insanity was more likely to occur in the case of a person like the defendant, who had the hereditary taint of insanity, as had been shown in the case of Mrs. Bradley. He told of cases of insanity that had come under his observation in his practice in Washington due to the causes present in the case of the prisoner. In one case the patient was sent to the insane hospital at St. Elizabeth, near Washington.

District Attorney Baker, prompted by the experts he has retained in the case for the Government, Drs. Brush of Baltimore and Jelliffe of New York, led the expert for the defence through a lively cross-examination. But at 3 o'clock in the afternoon, when court adjourned until to-morrow, he had not been shaken in his opinion as to the insanity of Mrs. Bradley at the time she fired the fatal shot.

The two other experts for the defence, Drs. Hill of Baltimore and Evans of New Jersey, will go on the stand to-morrow. This will close the case for the defence, after which the Government experts will be heard, and then will come the witnesses offered in rebuttal by the Government. From the progress made in the expert testimony to-day it is evident that the case cannot be concluded before the middle or latter part of next week.

"I send you copies of letters addressed to Senator Brown by Anna Adams, mother of Maude Adams, the actress. Preserve them and publish if any defence is needed for any act of rashness on my part."

MR. PRIVAT HERE LOOKING AT THE UNIVERSAL TONGUE.

Hopes That It Will Be Possible Soon to Hold a World's Esperanto Convention in This Country - Going West Just Now Because New York Is Stather Preoccupied. Young Mr. Edmond Privat is here Esperantoing. He arrived a little over a week ago from Europe, and his luggage consisted of many pieces of the propaganda which he is about to distribute wherever he finds soil in which it seems likely to take root and sprout. Young Mr. Privat, in short, is going to Esperanto all the way from Boston to Chicago and back again.

Mr. Privat is really the principal compercial traveller for the original manufacturer of Esperanto. Almost everybody knows that Dr. Zamenhof made the language just for fun and without any assistance to speak of from anybody. Mr. Privat has been travelling for the of Zamenhof in Europe for some time, and at the Cambridge, England, Esperanto convention last August the Russian oculist

America offered a fertile field for the efforts of Mr. Privat. Consequently he is here. For such a responsible place this mission ary is very young. He says he is not yet 19, and if Esperantoists are to be judged by the same signs as other people there's no need to question his statement. Still many of the most prominent martyrs mentioned in Mr. Fox's book were younger yet.

who invented the language suggested that

It pleases the missionary to find the Esperanto cause in a promising condition here. He said yesterday that there are no less than sixty-five Esperanto societies in the United States, though he couldn't tell what the total membership was. He had already addressed the New York Esperanto Society-in Esperanto of courseand from his account of it most of the members present seemed to understand what he was talking about. Dr. Max Talmey is the head local Esperantoer and Mr. Privat says he speaks the language very well. Dr. Talmey, like Dr. Zamenhof, s an oculist Esperanto is now about twenty years of age, but it never met Mr. Privat until five years ago. Since then it has made rapid strides. Many well informed Esperantists look forward to the day when Esperanto and rattles shall be found in every well regulated cradle. Certain it is that if Mr. Frivat owes to his knowledge of Esperanto his facility in acquiring the English language it's an excellent ad for Esperanto. The young missionary began to learn English only four months ago, and though his accent would still attract attention even in Man-hattan, he already has a working knowl-edge of the language that will vastly in-crease his value to the Esperanto house of anybody could learn the universal language as quickly as young Mr. Privat. It took him something less than three weeks and, be says he has known it ever since. The secret of Esperanto, according to its propagandist, is to go at it and stick at it until you learn it—a few hours good hard sawing every day and almost before you know it the trick is done.

It's mostly a matter of root and suffix. You add one of them to the other, the addition of which to which being performed more or less in accordance with rules and individual preferences and things. But it appears to be a fascinating employment, for they are doing it, not only all over Europe but also in Japan, where there is a regular organ printed in the new language. It was some trouble for Mr. Privat to keep his head above the propaganda that littered his room long enough to discourse about it. At times it seemed that he must shout it. At times it seemed that he must about it. At times it seemed that he must go under, but youth was with him and he managed to keep up.

He explained that Esperanto had different advisory boards which recommended ad-ditions to the language from time to time, especially with reference to words touching in the new language

As for poetry, the youthful missionary was certain that Esperanto lent itself to that branch of literature splendidly. To prove it he read after some urging, but not too much, a poem he had lately written himself. It has not yet found its way into print, but Mr. Privat says that it will soon be seen in the American Esperanto Journal.
This publication was naturally founded in in the new language This publication was naturally founded in Boston, but it is soon coming to New York.

Everything does.

Mr. Privat's auditor knew nothing of Esperanto, but he was interested in poetry and he listened closely to the verse. He heard words that sounded like "laguna." His wits thus sharpened by curiosity, it was not long before be thought he detected the word "gondoia." "Ha, ha!" said he to himself. "It's a boat on a lake." And putting his nose to the trail he ran on with

Pretty soon he came across, or thought he did, a word that closely resembled "palazzo," if there is such a word, and not long after that a bisyllable that sounded like "flutoi." oyful yelps.

"Hold!" said he, when the poet had finished. "Let me have a guess. I think you were reading something about somepody who was in a boat that was floating body who was in a boat that was floating about some water near a palace and he was playing some kind of a musical instrument, probably a flute."

Mr. Privat alleged that it was quite wonderful. It only showed how easy it was to learn Esperanto.

"But," he said, "I say not to try to write poetries in Esperanto the first thing. I know Esperanto for five years now, but I never write poetries in that language until four years ago. Some people, they want to try to write poetries the very first night they know Esperanto."

want to try to write poetries the very first night they know Esperanto."

The Esperanto missionary has been advised that the present is not a good time to do much missionary work in this city. He will therefore go further West for a few weeks and reserve most of his New York propaganda until the soil is more attractive early in the new year.

He hoped that in a year or two it will be possible to hold the annual Esperanto convention in this country, maybe at Cambridge if the Yale game happens to be played in New Haven that year. He does not favor holding the convention near Columbia University. Presumably he fears a clash with Brander Matthews and his Simple Spellers.

Mr. Wittpenn said he would announce in a week or ten days the names of the men he will appoint as members of the city's law department and the Board of Finance. He wishes to give these officials a chance to confer on matters of financial policies before beginning their duties. He will make public the other appointments on December 31.

CLINTON, Ill., Nov. 25 .- Two robbers this afternoon held up three attaches of the State Bank of Clinton, robbed the bank of $2,200 in gold and silver, locked three men in the vault and made a spectacular escape from the very arms of the police. Before leaving they used the bank's telephone to notify the police that the bank's men were locked in their own vault and that they might smother if the police did not come at once and let them out. Having attended to this humane detail the robbers took their booty and escaped. The janitor of the bank was busy at his afternoon cleaning when the two robbers entered the side door, which had been left open after banking hours. In the bank were George Argo, assistant cashier, and R. B. Young, bookkeeper.

"Up with your hands!" commanded the robber, covering the janitor with two revolvers. The ianitor complied and was soon tied The janitor complied and was soon tied to a chair with a gag in his mouth. Argo and Young heard the scuffle and started toward the door, but were stopped by the robbers. They were treated like the janitor. The robbers, finding that the time clock had been set, grabbed what loose coin they could find and were about to leave when Cashier John E. Murphy strolled into the bank. He was covered with a revolver, and together with the other bank employees was forced into the vault. After closing the door and notifying the police of the predicament of the imprisoned officials the robbers made a dash for the Henica Hotel.
